

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Second line of the sample document.

Third line, kept short on purpose.

Reading foreign literature means meeting sentences that do not survive translation by themselves. A reader needs the original and the rendering side by side, on the same line of sight, without losing the place.

This paragraph exists so the self test can select across several lines and check that the anchor (page number plus character offset) still resolves after the zoom level changes.

